

Bobby's Bubble Bay

An original bedtime story for ages 4–7. Reading time: about 4 minutes.

Kids Book Videos

Bobby the beaver did not want a bath. "Baths are boring," he said. He felt stubborn. He crossed his arms and pouted.

His father smiled. "Then let us not take a bath," he said. "Let us sail to Bubble Bay instead."

"Bubble Bay?" asked Bobby. He felt curious.

Father filled the tub with warm water. He poured in bubble soap. Soon the tub was full of foam. It looked like a bay full of clouds. Father placed a toy whale in the water.

"Welcome to Bubble Bay, Captain Bobby!" said Father.

Bobby climbed in. The water was warm and soft. Bubbles floated everywhere. The toy whale bobbed on the waves. Bobby felt his stubbornness melting away.

"Splish, splash, bubbles pop, worries float and never stop," sang Father.

Bobby splished with his paws. Splash! Water droplets sparkled. He made the whale dive under the bubbles. Then it popped up with a whoosh. Bobby giggled.

"Splish, splash, bubbles pop, worries float and never stop," sang Father again.

Bobby scooped up a handful of bubbles. He blew them gently. They floated up, up, up. Each bubble carried a tiny worry away. Pop! There went the grumpy mood. Pop! There went the wiggles.

Bobby washed his ears. He washed his tail. The warm water felt wonderful. He did not feel stubborn anymore. He felt relaxed and happy.

"Splish, splash, bubbles pop, worries float and never stop," sang Father one last time.

Father wrapped Bobby in a fluffy towel. It was warm from the dryer. Bobby felt like a cozy burrito. His fur was clean and soft. He smelled like bubble soap.

He put on his pajamas. They felt extra soft on clean skin. He climbed into bed. His body felt warm and tingly.

Sleep now, little beaver. Bubble Bay has washed your day away. Dream of sailing warm and foamy seas.

Moral: A warm bath can wash away a grumpy mood along with the day's dust.

The End