The Little Red Hen

KIDS BOOK VIDEOS

On a sunny farm lived a busy little red hen named Tuktuk, with her three fluffy yellow chicks.

One morning, Tuktuk found some golden grains of wheat. "Who will help me plant these seeds?" she asked.

"Not I!" said the sleepy dog. "Not I!" said the lazy cat. "Not I!" said the drowsy duck.

"Then I will plant them myself," said Tuktuk. And she did — scratch, scratch, scratch in the soft earth.

Soon green shoots peeped up. When the wheat grew tall and golden, Tuktuk asked, "Who will help me cut the wheat?"

"Not I!" said the dog. "Not I!" said the cat. "Not I!" said the duck.

"Then I will cut it myself," said Tuktuk. And she cut every stalk and carried every bundle to the mill, all by herself.

Back home, she asked, "Who will help me bake the bread?"
"Not I!" said the dog. "Not I!" said the cat. "Not I!" said the duck.

"Then I will bake it myself," said Tuktuk. She kneaded the dough, and soon the oven smelled warm and wonderful.

Out came a golden loaf of bread, crusty and soft. Tuktuk's chicks cheeped with joy.

"Who will help me eat this bread?" asked Tuktuk. "I will! I will! I will!" cried the dog, the cat, and the duck.

"No, no, no!" said Tuktuk. "I planted, I cut, I baked — all by myself. So my chicks and I will eat it all by ourselves." And they did — crumb by crumb.

Those who do not help with the work cannot share in the reward.
