Moonbeam Mail

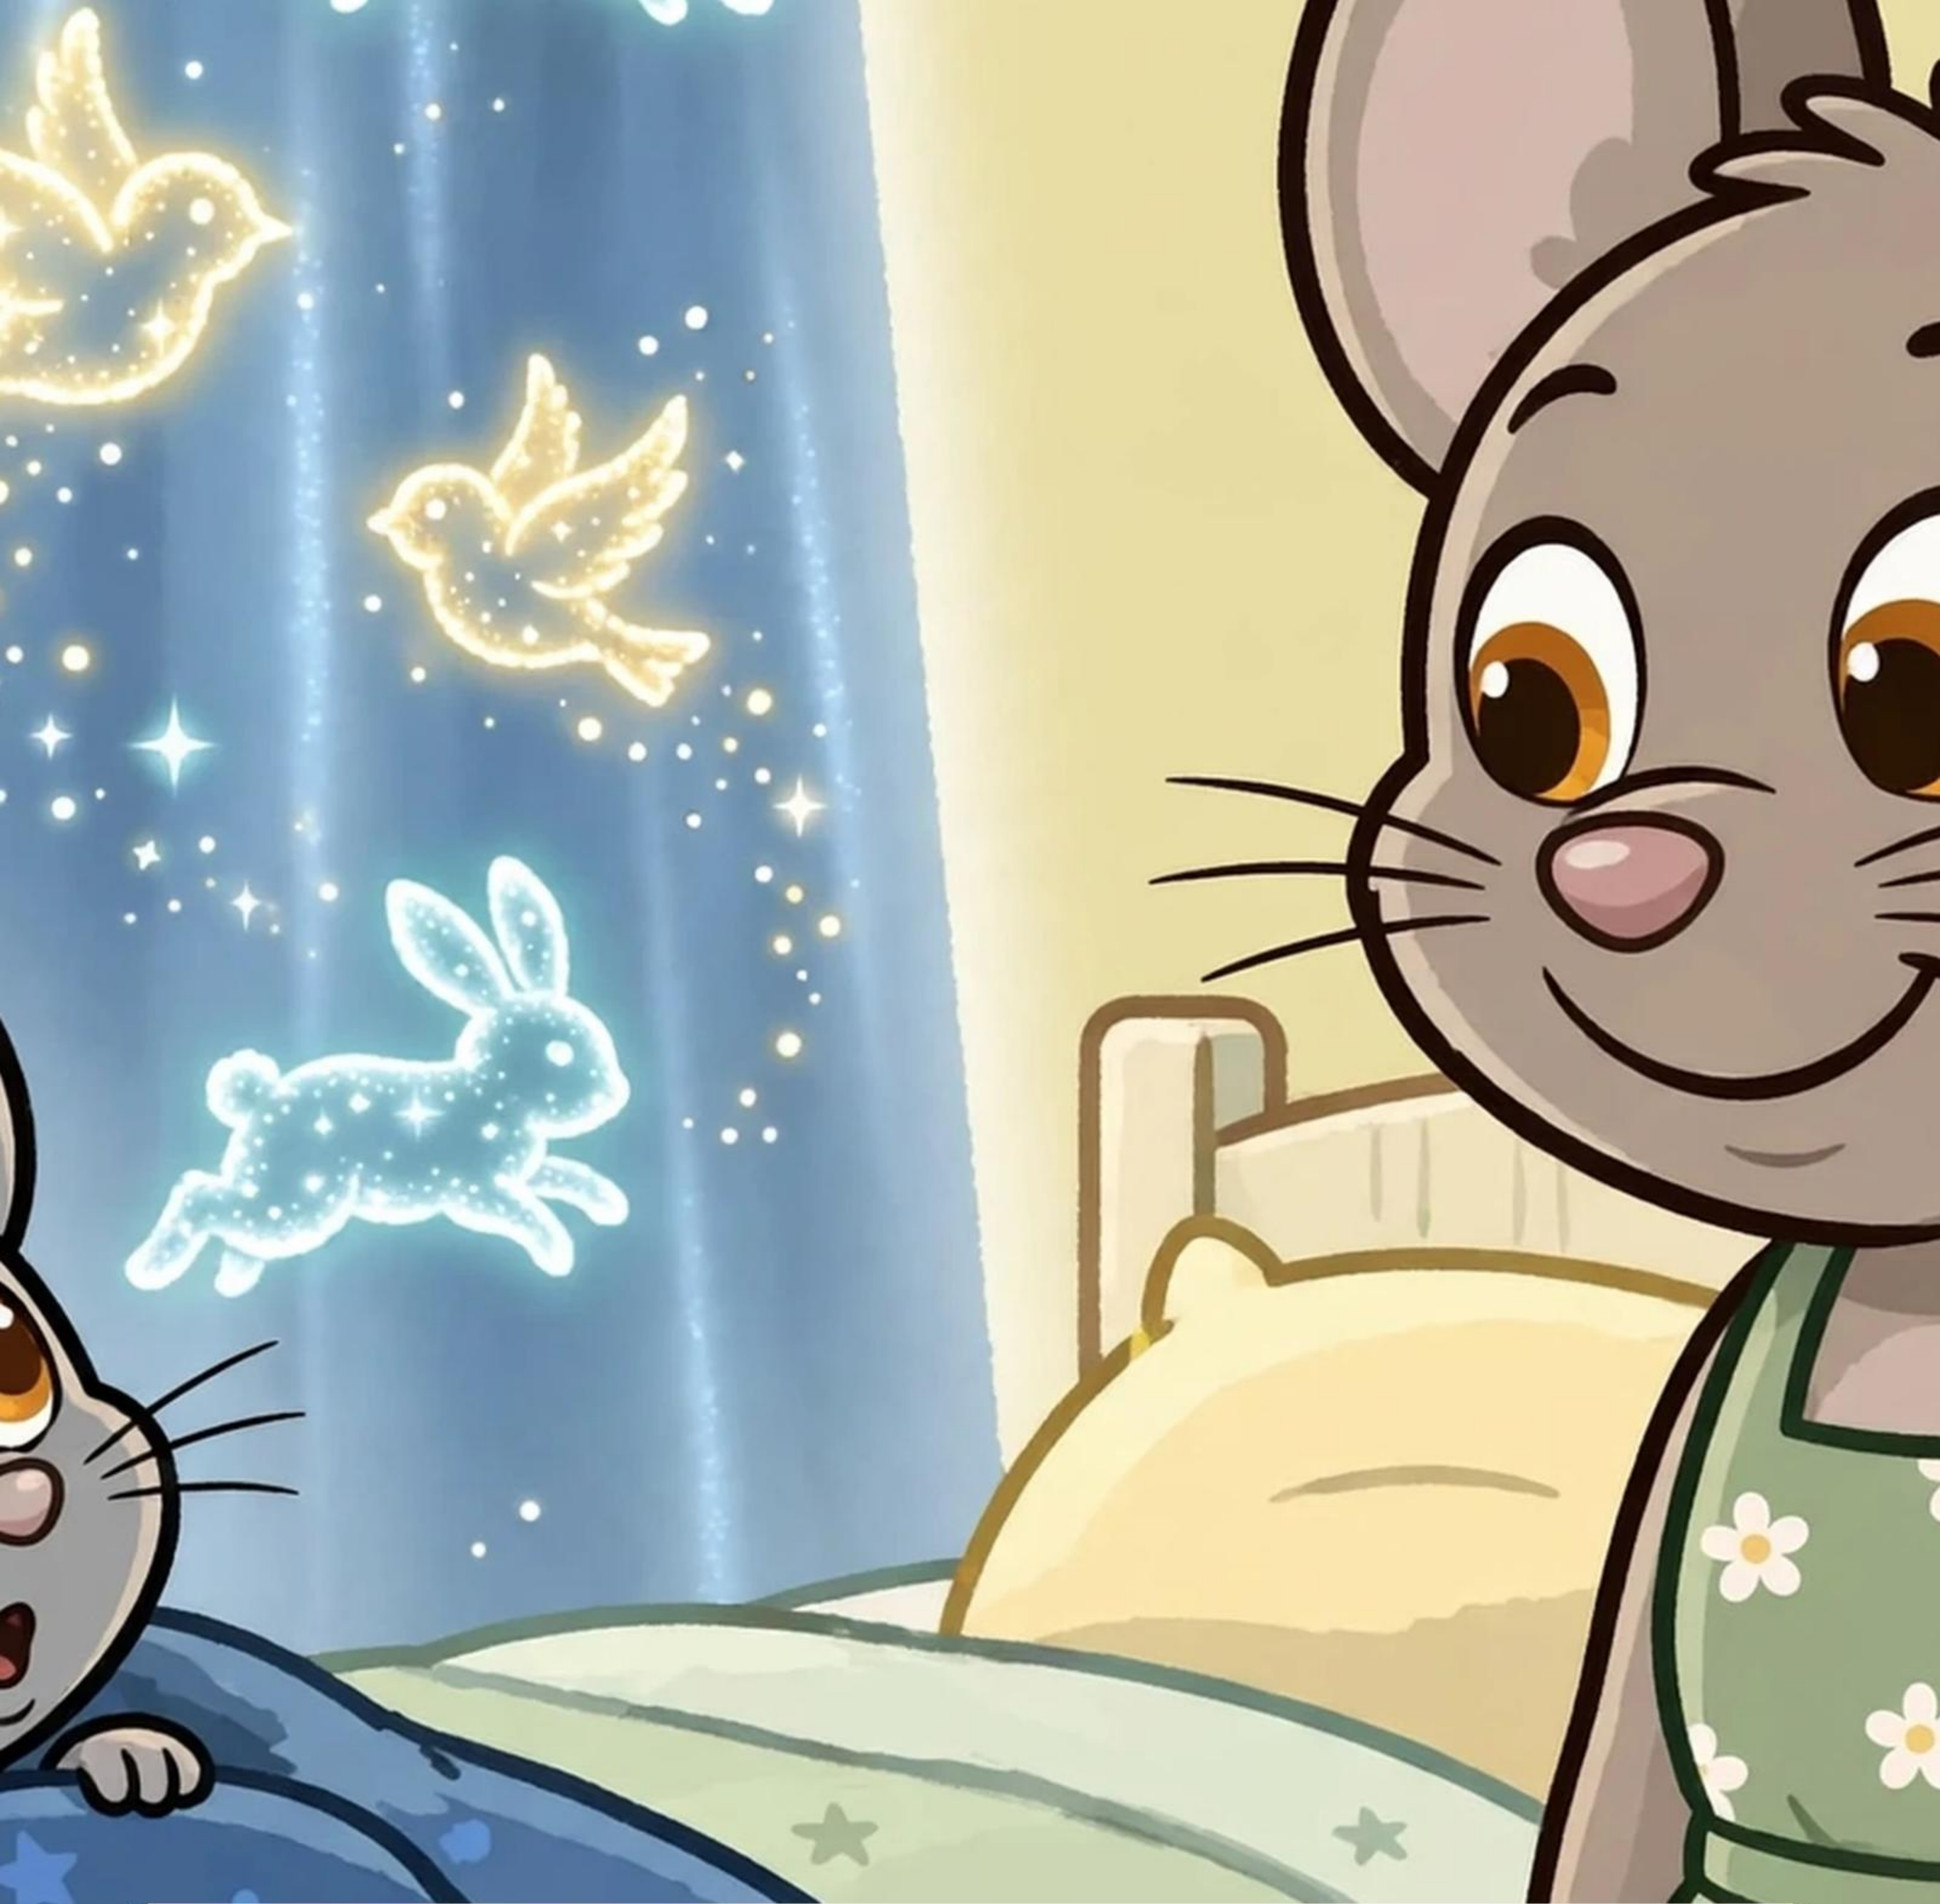

KIDS BOOK VIDEOS

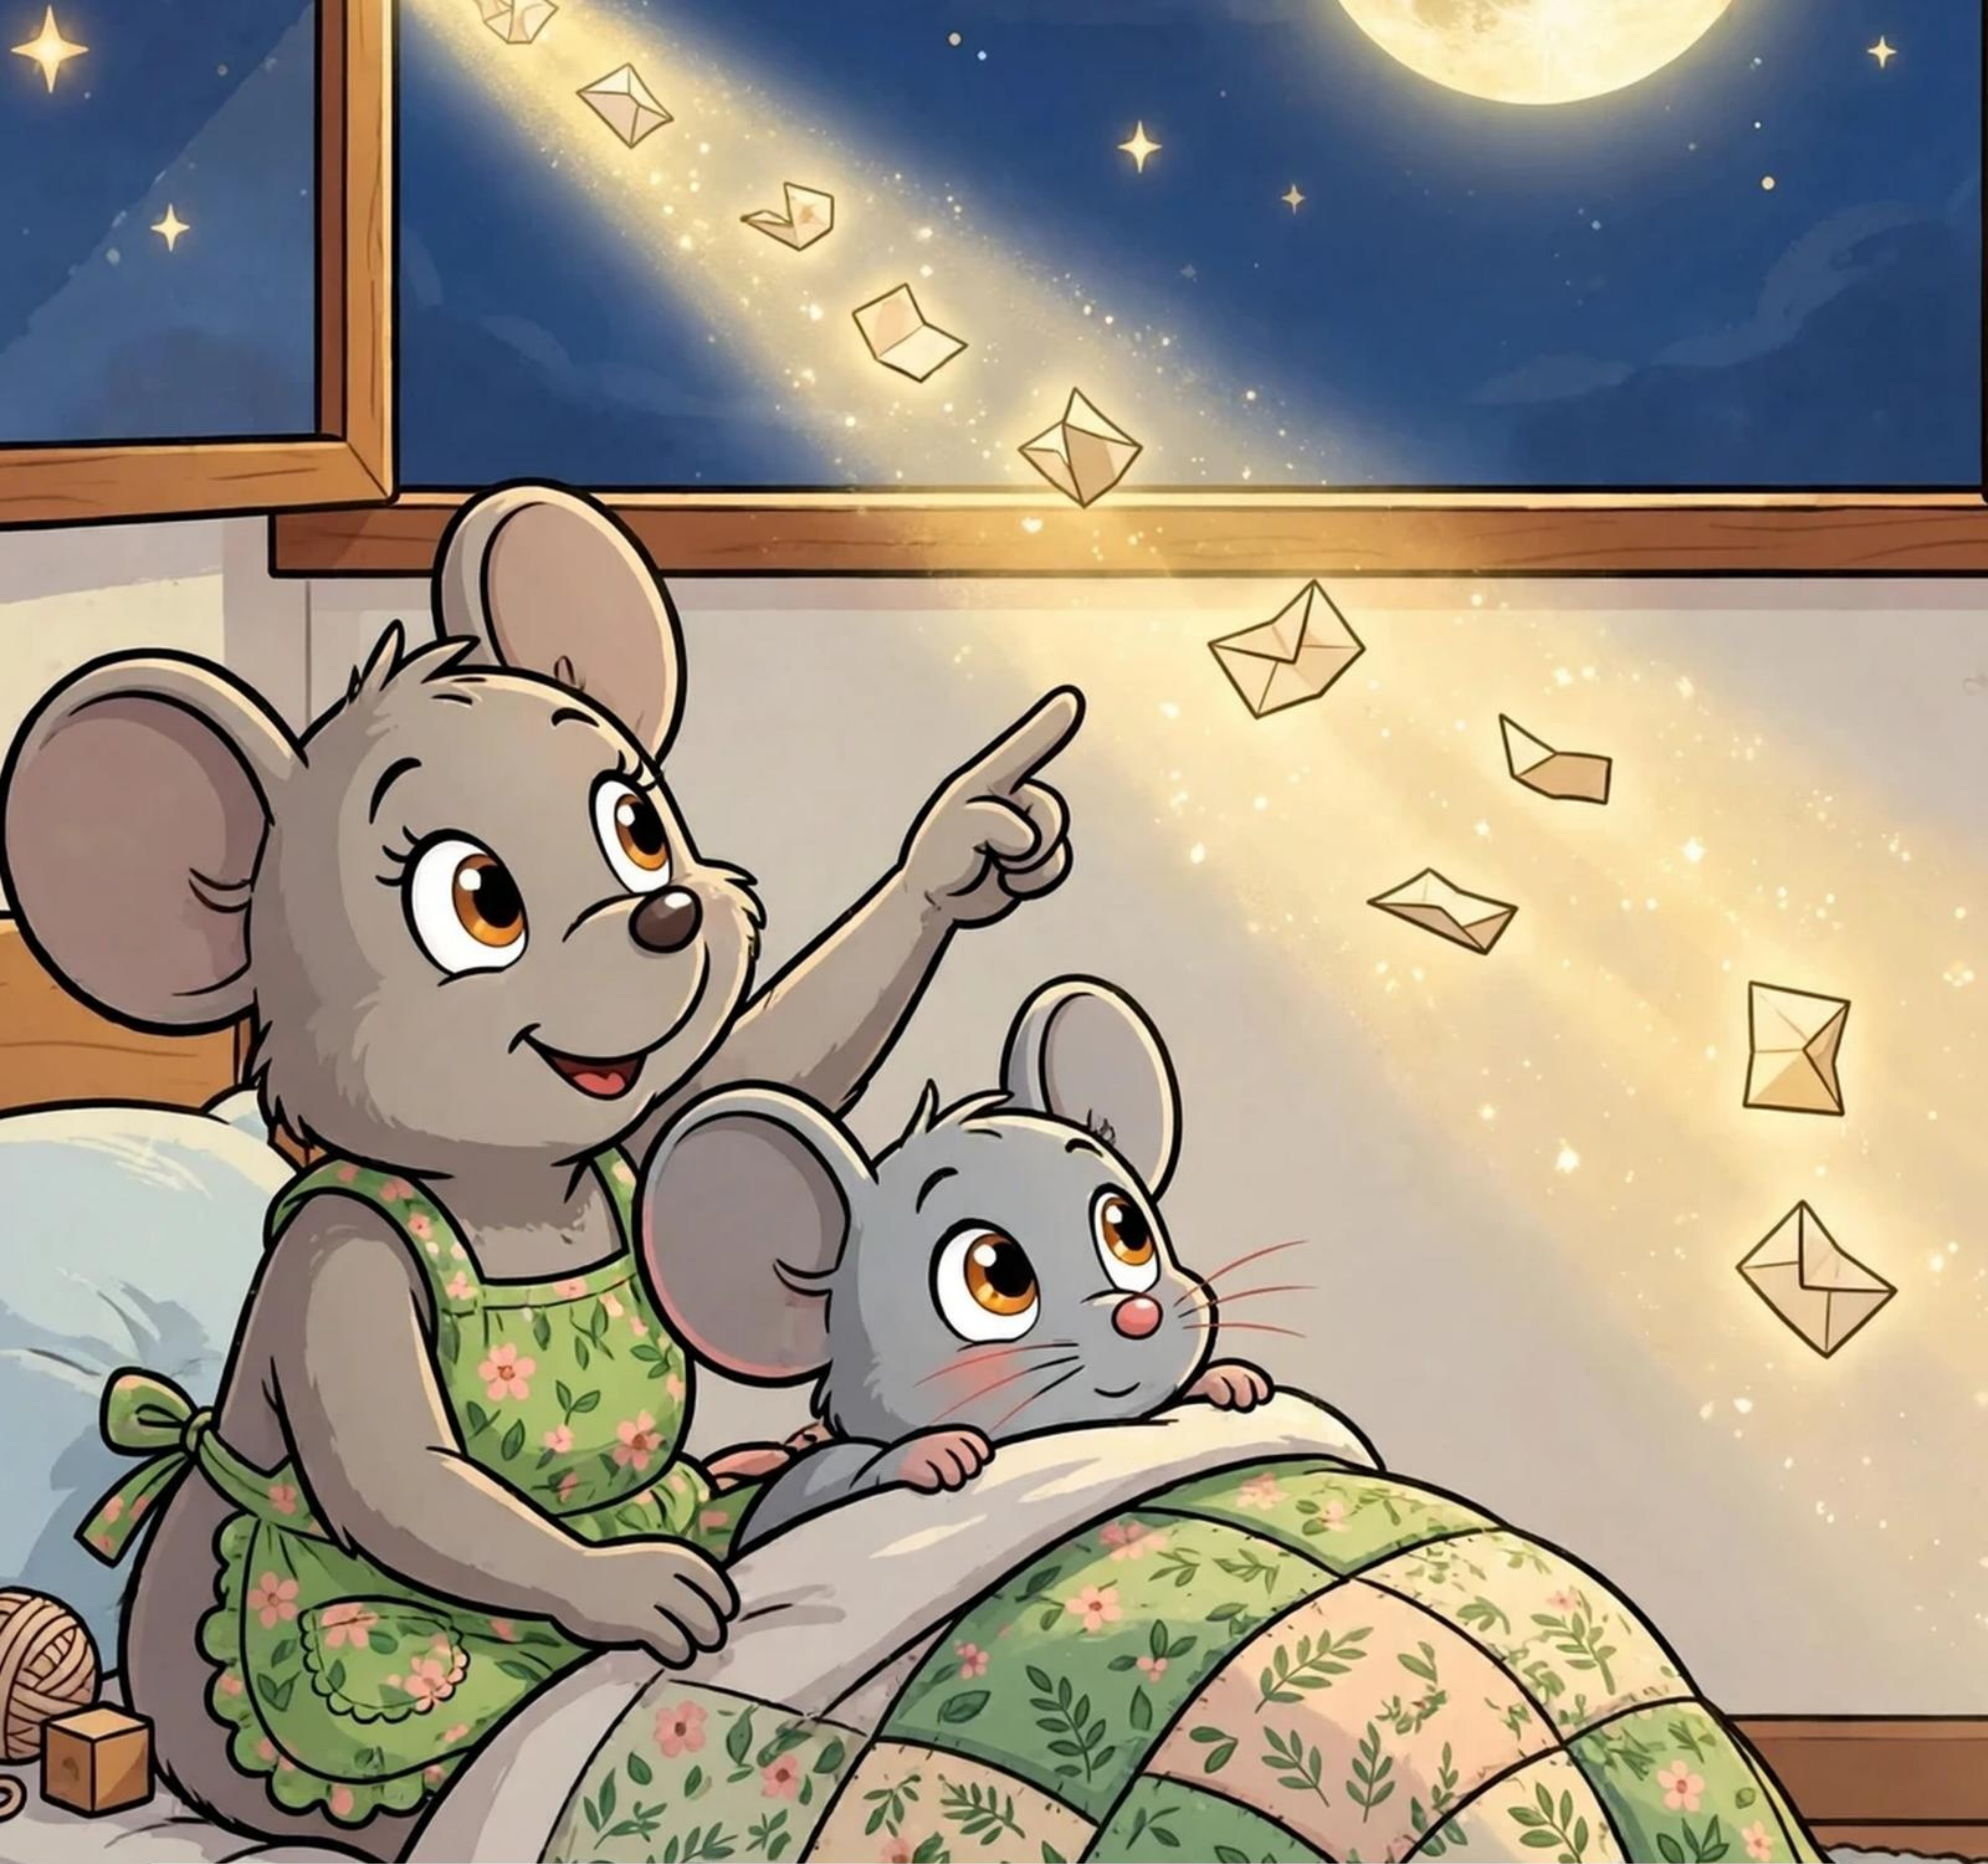

Mimi the mouse lived in a cozy burrow at the edge of Willowmere Wood. She was afraid of the light on her wall. Every night, a bright stripe shone across her bedroom. It moved slowly. It looked strange. Mimi felt scared and hid under her blanket.

"Mama," she squeaked, "there is a glowing snake on my wall!"

Mama Mouse came to look. She smiled. "That is not a snake, sweetheart. That is moonbeam mail."

"Moonbeam mail?" asked Mimi. She felt curious.

"The moon sends letters at night," said Mama. "They slide through the window on beams of light. Watch."

Mimi peeked out from her blanket. The bright stripe glowed softly. It did look a bit like a letter — a long, shimmery letter.

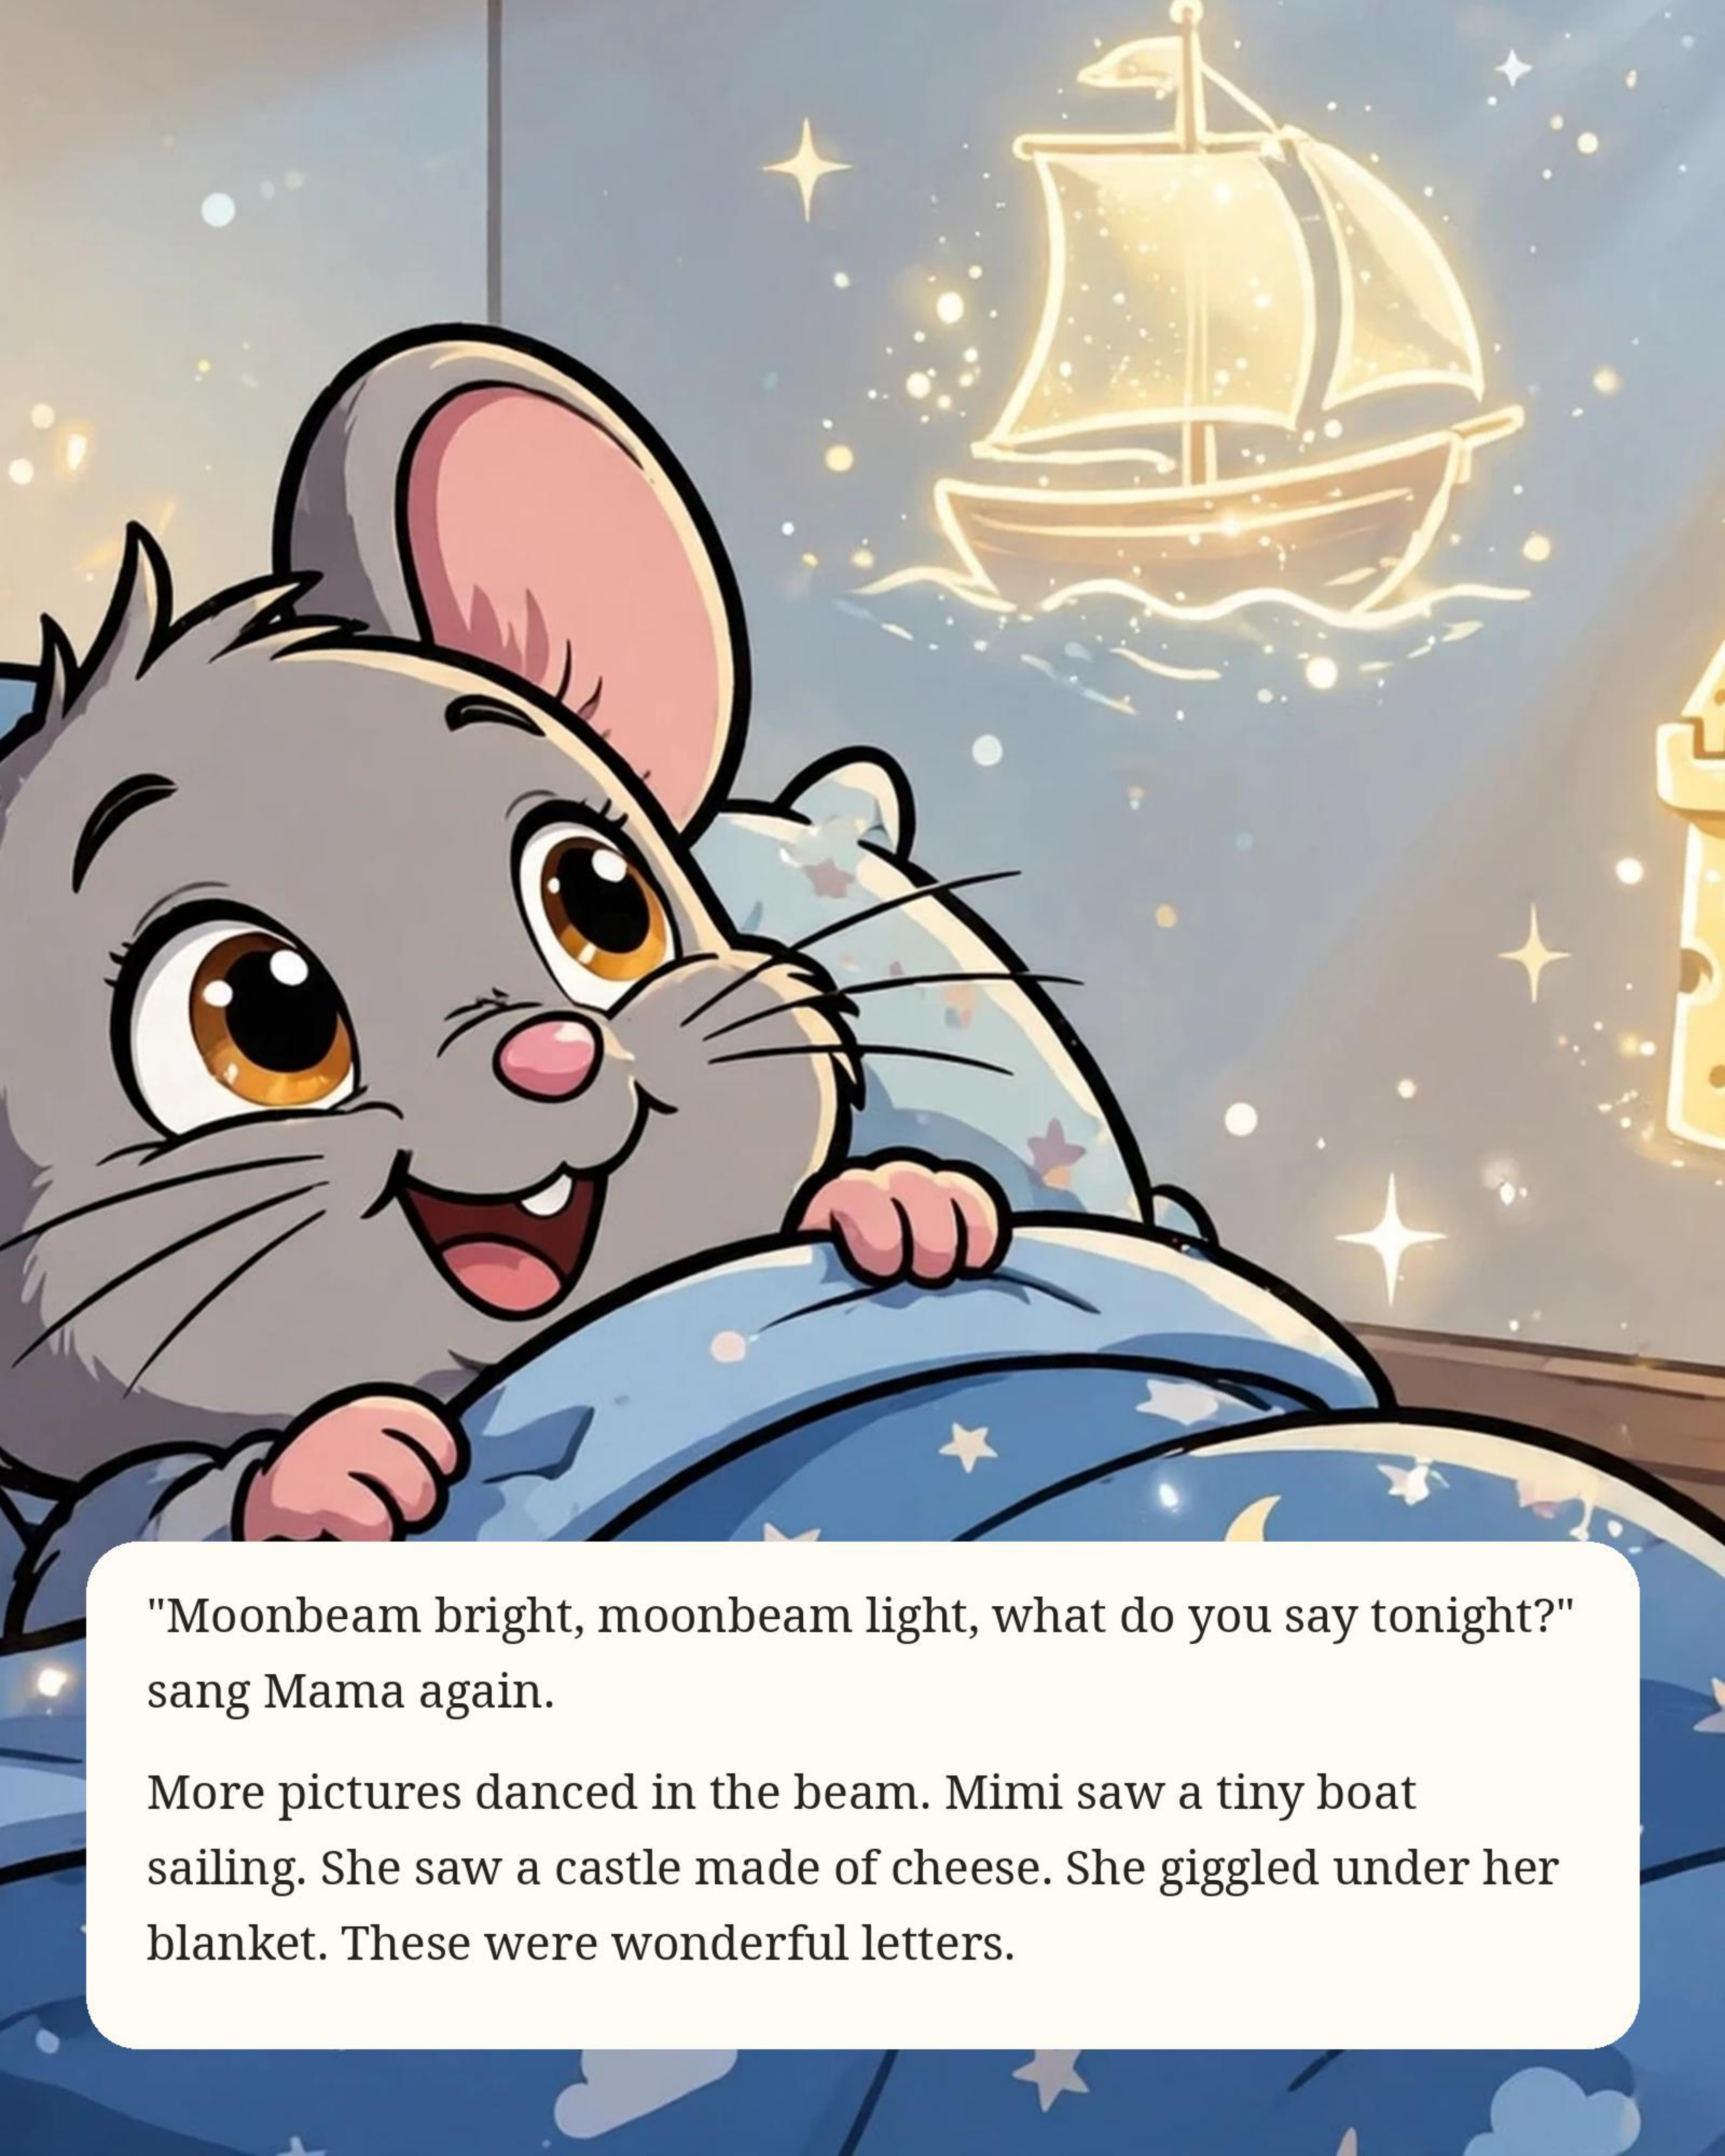

"Moonbeam bright, moonbeam light, what do you say tonight?" sang Mama.

As she sang, pictures appeared in the beam! Mimi saw tiny dancing shapes. They looked like rabbits hopping. They looked like birds flying. The moon was sending picture letters!

"Those are dreams being delivered," whispered Mama. "The moon sends them to sleeping children. The beam is just the delivery path."

Mimi felt amazed. She was not scared anymore. She felt special — the moon was delivering mail right through her room!

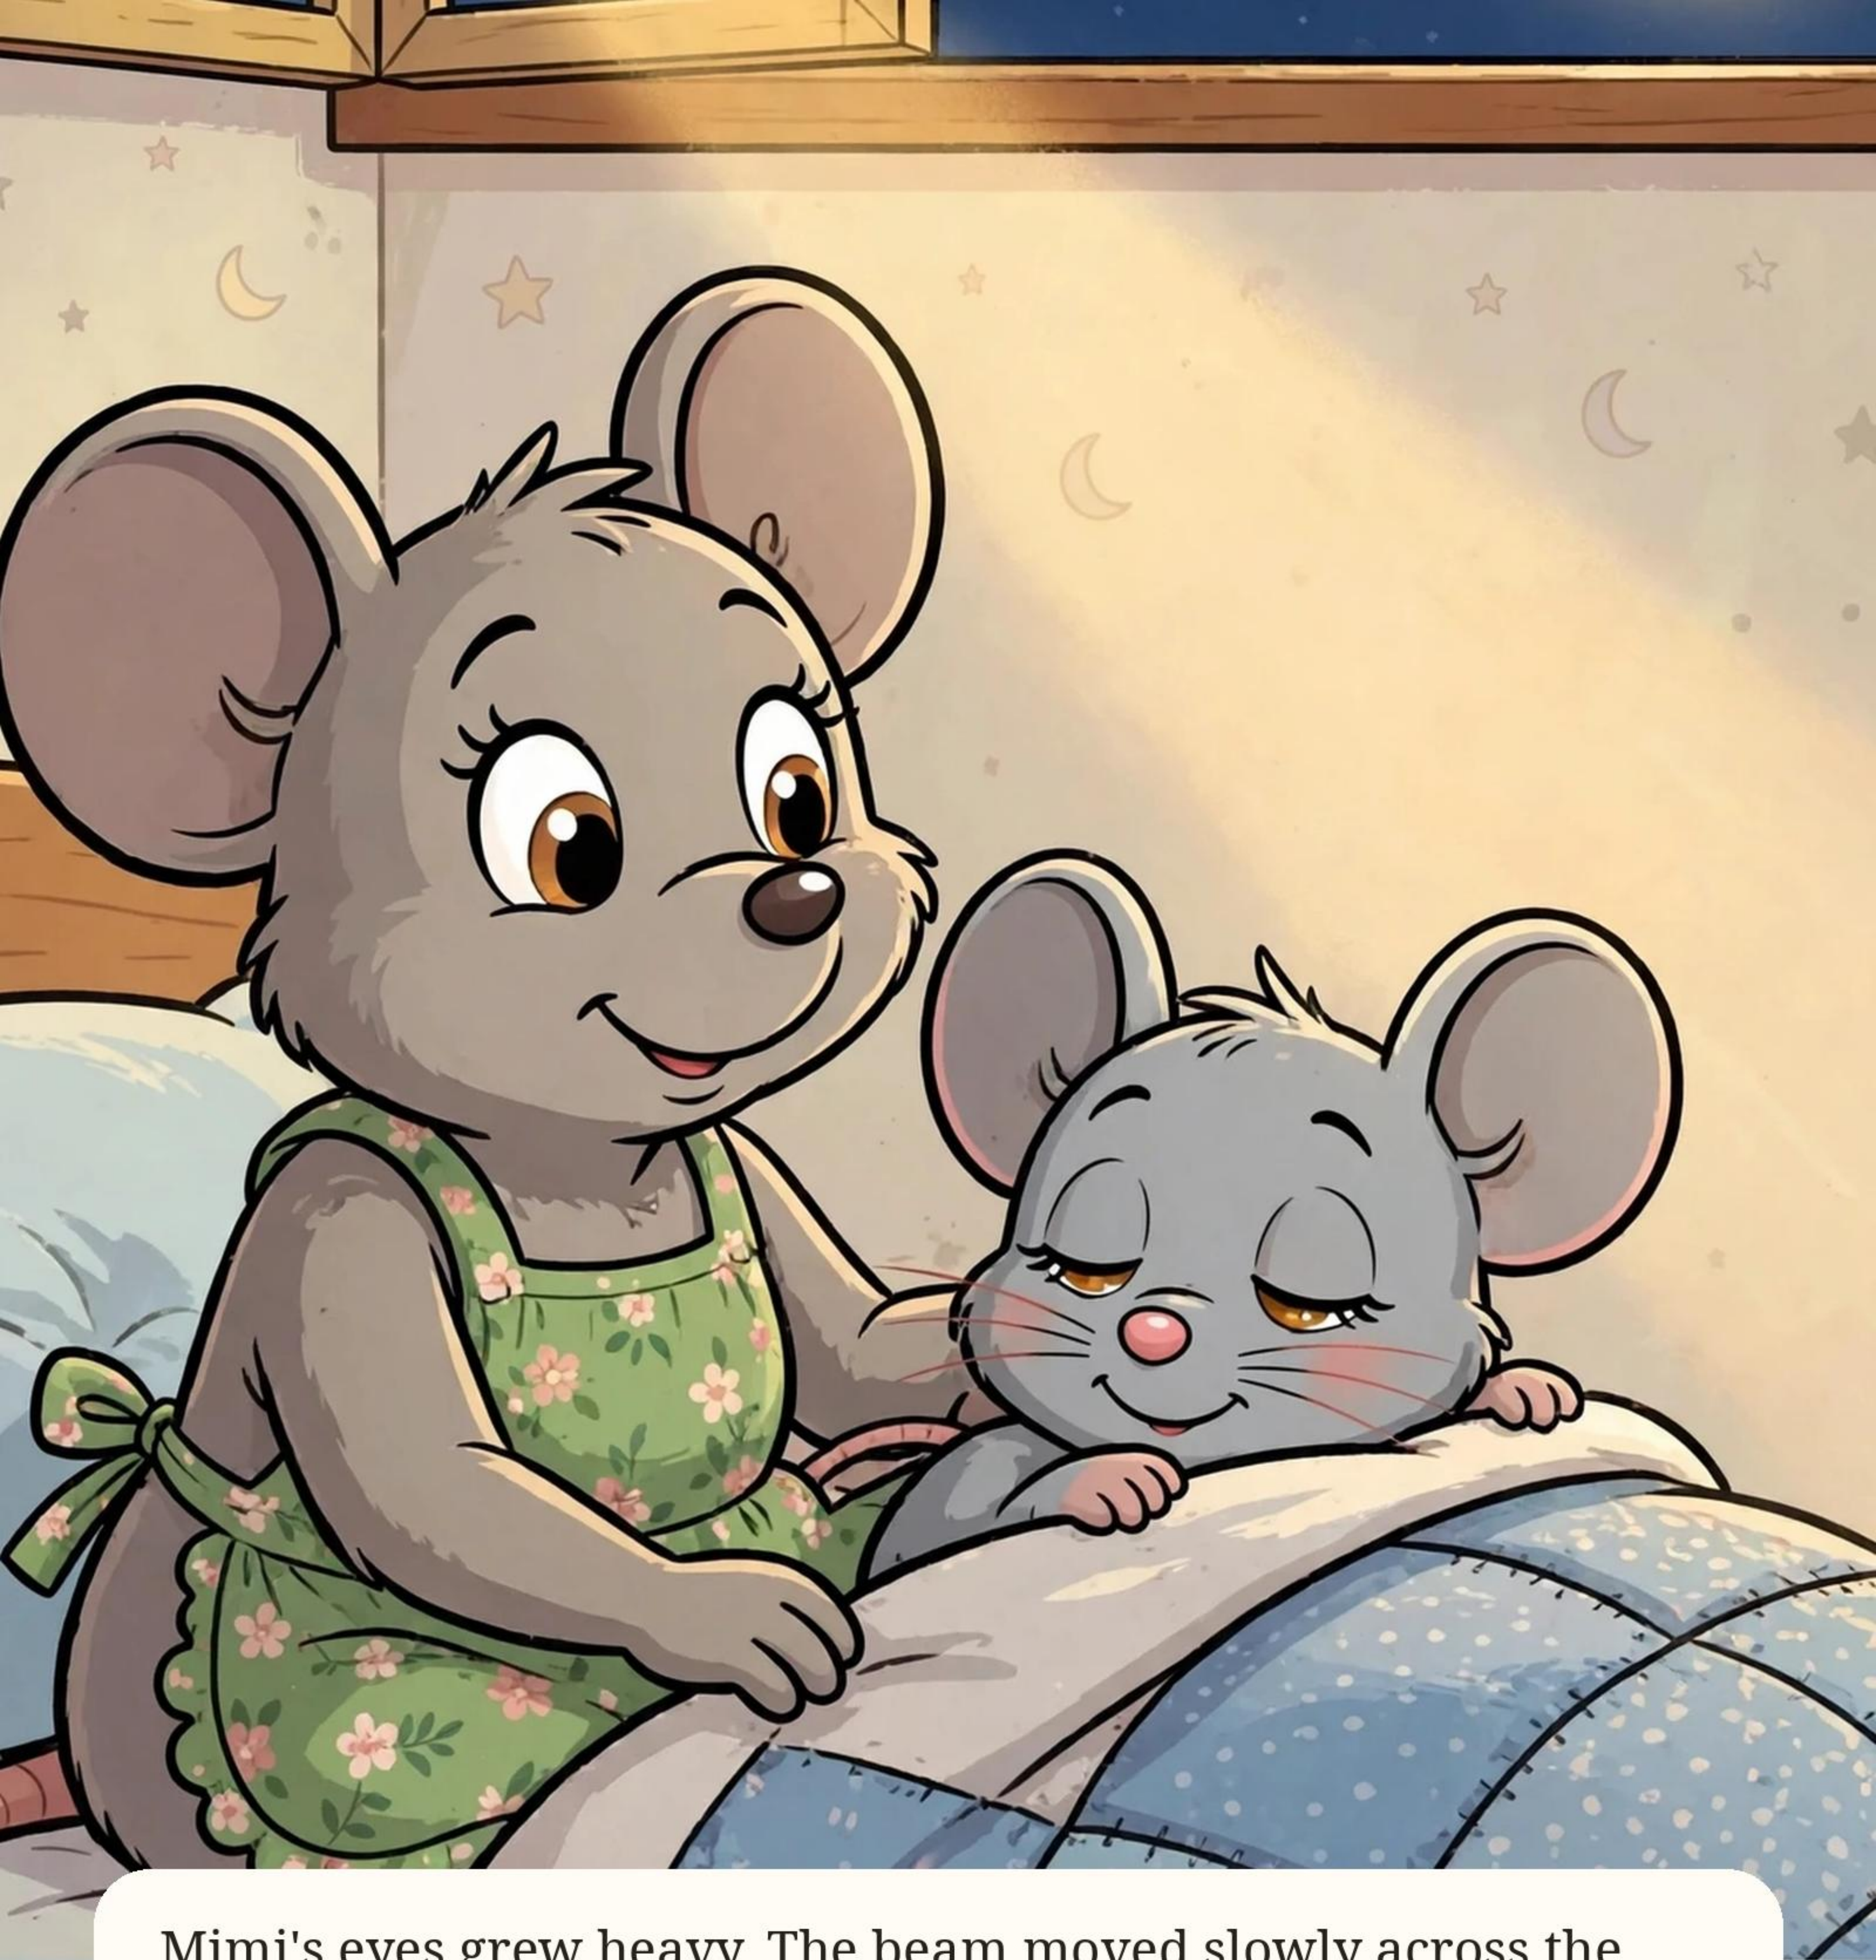

"Moonbeam bright, moonbeam light, what do you say tonight?" sang Mama again.

More pictures danced in the beam. Mimi saw a tiny boat sailing. She saw a castle made of cheese. She giggled under her blanket. These were wonderful letters.

Mimi snuggled deeper into bed, watching the moonbeam mail float by, wondering what dream the moon would leave for her.

"Moonbeam bright, moonbeam light, what do you say tonight?" sang Mama one last time.

Mimi's eyes grew heavy. The beam moved slowly across the wall — gentle and warm. It felt like the moon was tucking her in with light.

She fell asleep watching the pictures dance. That night she dreamed of sailing a tiny boat to a castle made of cheese. The moon had delivered her dream right on time.

Sleep now, little Mimi.

Sleep now, little Mimi.

The End
