Mimi and the Broken Boat

KIDS BOOK VIDEOS

Mimi was a tiny mouse with a little wooden boat — her favorite toy in the whole world. Every day, she sailed it on Bluebell Pond.

One windy day, the boat bumped a rock.

CRACK!

The boat split in two.

Mimi felt sad. Her heart felt heavy. Tears filled her eyes.

"My boat," she whispered. "It is broken."

Grandma Mouse came to sit with her. She put her arm around her.

"I see you feel sad," she said.

Mimi nodded.

"It is okay to feel sad," she said. "It was your favorite boat."

Mimi cried a little. Grandma waited. She did not rush her — she just stayed close.

Then she said, "Sad feelings need soft time."

"Sad feelings need soft time," she said again, stroking her ear.

"Sad feelings need soft time," she said one more time.

Mimi breathed slowly. She felt a little lighter.

"What can we do?" she asked.

Grandma smiled. "We can fix it together," she said.

They found some sticky pine sap. They pressed the two halves together. They tied a string around the middle.

The boat had a crack line now — but it floated again.

Mimi put it in Bluebell Pond. It sailed in little circles. Mimi smiled her first smile of the day.

"Thank you, Grandma," she said.

That night, Mimi put her boat by her bed. The crack showed in the moonlight, but Mimi did not mind anymore. The boat was still her boat.

Mimi snuggled under her leaf blanket while Grandma sang a soft song. She had felt sad earlier. Now she felt peaceful.

She closed her eyes. She was loved. She was cozy.

Sleep now, little Mimi.

Sleep now, little Mimi.
