The Dog and Its Reflection

KIDS BOOK VIDEOS

There was once a chubby little dog named Duggu. He had long floppy ears, a waggy tail, and the biggest appetite in the whole village!

One morning the butcher gave Duggu a big, juicy bone. "Oh, what a treat!" said Duggu, holding it tight in his mouth. "This is all mine!"

Duggu trotted off happily, the bone clutched between his teeth, till he came to a little wooden bridge over a still blue pond.

As he crossed the bridge, Duggu looked down into the clear water. And what did he see? Another dog! Looking right back up at him — with a bone in its mouth too!

"That dog's bone looks bigger than mine!" thought Duggu. His eyes grew wide and greedy.

"If I snatch his bone too, I will have TWO bones!" he thought.
He opened his mouth wide to grab the other bone.

SPLASH! The moment his mouth opened, his own bone slipped out — plop! — and sank to the bottom of the pond.

Duggu stared at the water. The other dog was gone too — because it was only his own reflection! There was no second bone at all.

Poor Duggu stood on the bridge with an empty mouth and a rumbling tummy. He had lost his lovely bone for nothing.

With his tail drooping low, Duggu trotted home. "Next time," he sighed, "I will be happy with what I have, and not be greedy for more."

Be happy with what you have — greed can make you lose it all.
