The Elves and the Shoemaker

KIDS BOOK VIDEOS

In a little town with cobbled streets lived an old shoemaker. His shop was tiny, but his heart was big.

Every morning he swept the floor and sang as he stitched shoes. His wife helped him, humming along.

But the shoemaker was growing poor. Leather cost so much money, and fewer people came to buy.

One evening, only one piece of leather was left. Just enough for a single pair of shoes.

"I will cut them tonight and stitch them in the morning," said the shoemaker, and he went to bed tired.

But in the morning — oh! — the shoes were already finished. Stitched so neatly, so beautifully!

"Who could have done this?" said the shoemaker, scratching his head. His wife just smiled.

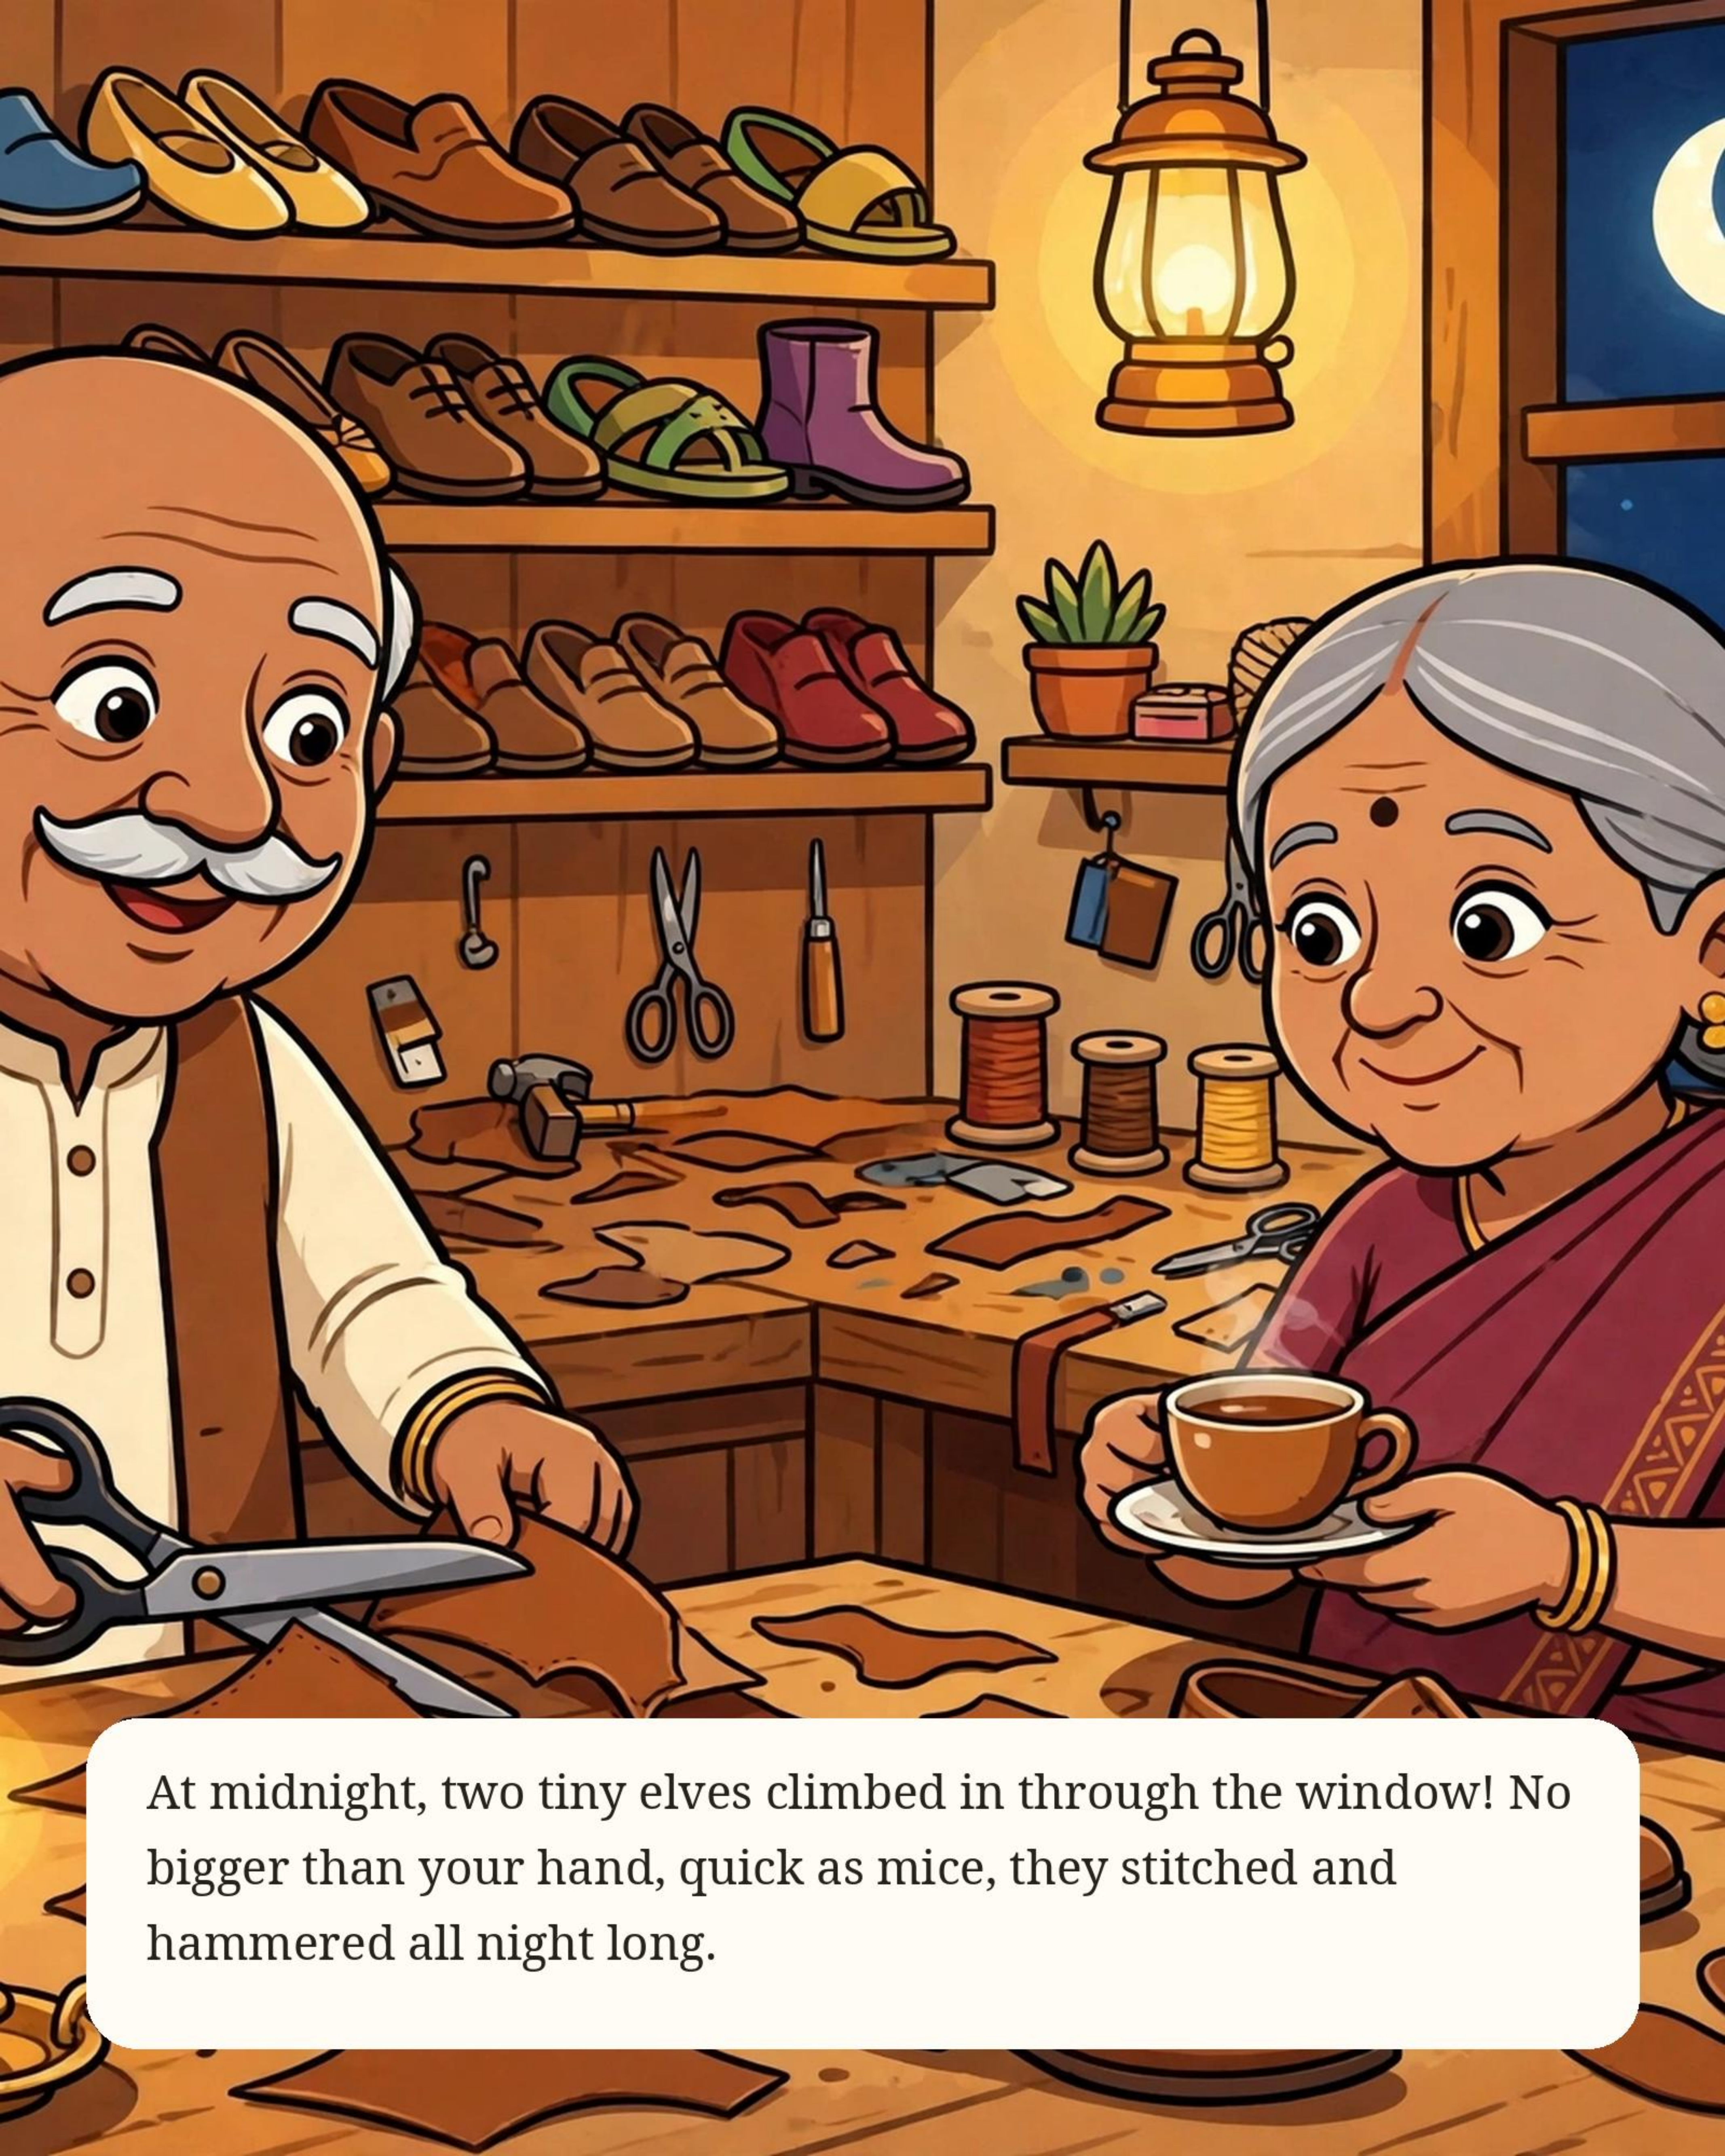

A kind gentleman bought the shoes for a good price. With the money, the shoemaker bought leather for two pairs — and in the morning, two perfect pairs were waiting again!

This happened night after night. The little shop grew busy again, and the shoemaker and his wife were happy.

But they still wondered. "Let us stay awake and watch tonight," whispered the wife.

At midnight, two tiny elves climbed in through the window! No bigger than your hand, quick as mice, they stitched and hammered all night long.

"The poor dears have no warm clothes," said the wife, tears in her eyes. "Let us make them tiny shirts and shoes and leave them out."

That night they left the little clothes by the workbench. The elves danced with joy, put them on, and twirled around the room!

Then the elves climbed out the window, singing — and the shoemaker and his wife never saw them again. But their shop stayed full of happy customers forever.

Kind hearts are repaid with kindness.
