

The Chalk Garden

An original bedtime story for ages 4–7. Reading time: about 4 minutes.

Kids Book Videos

Lily loved drawing with chalk on the sidewalk.

One sunny morning, she drew a garden.

She drew flowers.

She drew a butterfly.

She drew a little bird.

She felt happy.

Then something strange happened.

The chalk butterfly fluttered its wings.

Flap, flap.

Lily felt amazed.

"Did you just move?" she whispered.

The butterfly lifted off the sidewalk.

It flew one small loop.

Then it landed back on its chalk flower.

Lily felt delighted.

She drew a chalk sun.

It glowed warmly.
She drew chalk raindrops.
They fell softly on the chalk flowers.
Plip, plip, plip.
The chalk flowers swayed.
"My garden is alive," breathed Lily.
"Alive, alive, alive," she whispered.
That was three times she whispered it.
She felt joyful.
She drew a chalk rabbit.
It hopped twice.
Hop, hop.
She drew a chalk turtle.

It took one slow step.

Step.

Lily giggled.

Then she noticed something.

The chalk bird looked sad.

Its chalk beak drooped.

"What's wrong, little bird?" asked Lily.

She felt worried.

The bird hopped toward the edge of the sidewalk.

It looked at the real sky.

"Oh," said Lily softly.

"You want a friend."

She drew another bird beside it.

A friend bird.

The two chalk birds chirped.

Chirp, chirp.

They hopped together, happy now.

Lily felt warm inside.

She had helped.

As the sun went down, the chalk animals grew still.
The butterfly folded its wings.
The rabbit curled up.

The two birds tucked their heads.
"Goodnight, garden," whispered Lily.
"Goodnight, goodnight, goodnight."
That was three times she whispered it.
She felt sleepy.
The chalk glowed softly in the moonlight.
Sleep now, little artist.
Dream of gardens that wake when you draw them.

Moral: A little kindness makes every creation happier.

The End